

Income Generating Activities

DCI provides adult education, life-skills training, and technical support to families of our sponsored children so they can gradually become financially independent. Our programs include extensive training in new gardening methods, methods to increase farm yields, and farm marketing. DCI provides vegetable seeds, livestock (ducks, goats, cows and chickens), as well as training and provisions (e.g. the lease of ponds) for fish farming. The agricultural department of the Bangladesh Government has been very generous in providing support and free technical assistance for this program. DCI contributes to community development by providing training in prenatal care and basic reproductive health. By involving communities in the work we do, our goal is to create changes that will last – not to just help one generation of children and their families, but future generations as well.

DCI provides livestock for small income generation

DCI provides seeds, plants, fertilizer, and training for farmers