"As Yale's president, I am proud that our campus is home to this significant forum for advancing the cause of child rights. The partnership between Distressed Children & Infants International and Yale is built on shared values, and has proven to be deeply and reciprocally fruitful. The organization's core mission, much like the university's, is one founded on service and leadership."

– Dr. Peter Salovey, President of Yale University

"One of the best uses of my time in my childhood involved volunteering for DCI in order to improve the futures of the children of Bangladesh, India, Nicaragua and Nepal. Working for DCI has given me communication, organization, leadership, and technology skills that I use today. My experience made a serious impact on my career and helped create the person I am today. My request to you is to please get involved at any age, in any capacity. It changed my life for the better and I am sure it will change yours too."

– Dr. Lira Chowdhury, Urologist, University of California-Irvine, Medical Center (DCI Volunteer since 2005)

Distressed Children & Infants International (DCI) is a U.S.-based international non-profit child rights organization established at Yale University in 2003 with the goal of protecting child rights, preventing blindness and ending child labor worldwide by involving, empowering and developing the leadership of local American youth. DCI is currently seeking motivated volunteers/interns of all ages to join our efforts against child labor and blindness. DCI's volunteer program is designed according to the interests and career goals of each volunteer. DCI strives to create a platform and network for our volunteers' future leadership and success. DCI's motto is "Children Helping Children." DCI empowers local youth to make a difference by helping children in need both locally and worldwide. This experience provides them with a wonderful learning opportunity and further helps to develop their leadership skills at a young age.
